The European Legal Study Programme, in Bruges, provides students with an in-depth education in European law. The programme establishes a balance between the economic and the constitutional aspects of European law, and emphasizes both the increasing complexity of EU law and the context in which it is evolving. It should be noted that the programme is particularly demanding, with a variety of teaching methods, often similar to those used in North American law schools, and requires extensive individual preparation in advance of each class.

The programme is aimed at students with a degree in law. An intensive introductory course to prepare students with less prior experience in EU law is organised. The academic programme and its professional dimension prepare graduates to enter international law firms, European, international and national

EUROPEAN POLITICAL AND ADMINISTRATIVE STUDIES

Olivier Costa
Director of Studies
Michele Chang
Professor

The European Political and Administrative Study Programme, in Bruges, provides students with a comprehensive understanding of the institutions and policies of the EU. It also examines its role at the international, national and regional levels. Successful applicants primarily come from an academic background in political science, European studies, international relations or law. The programme aims to prepare students for a career in European or national administrations, NGOs, the private sector or to undertake a PhD. During the first semester, students follow three compulsory courses and an interactive simulation exercise. In the second semester, students choose three courses from a list of twenty to pursue more specialised interests. In addition, they write a Master's thesis within the framework of one of the eight research seminars offered. The second semester also features a study trip to Luxembourg and Strasbourg.

Each semester students follow one European General Study Course and can choose among thirteen workshops in professional development. Before the start of the academic year, the department offers an intensive introductory course for those students whose prior knowledge might not be sufficient to follow this programme.

The European Centre for Government Transformation programme (in partnership with Accenture and the Lisbon Council), the European Health Parliament (in partnership with Johnson & Johnson, Politico and Google) and the Transparency Group (in partnership with Transparency International) offer students the chance to work with professionals on concrete projects.

THE COLLEGE OF EUROPE: EDUCATION BEYOND FRONTIERS

The European construction has changed – and keeps changing – the history of a whole continent, the lives of hundreds of millions of European citizens and Europe's role in the world. Ever since its foundation at the very start of it, the College of Europe has had the mission to make well selected postgraduate students understand the political, legal, economic and international core issues, challenges and potentials of this unique process. This not for art's sake, but to prepare them for leadership functions requiring a strategic understanding of European issues. The College fulfils this function by constantly adapting its programmes and the composition of its teaching faculty to European developments, by challenging its students' minds with the different perspectives of senior academics and practitioners from over twenty-five different countries and numerous professional backgrounds, and by providing them with a very special – and intense – experience of living and working together in an international social and cultural context. If you wish to understand Europe, live it and prepare for a career transcending national borders then the College of Europe should be your choice.

EUROPEAN ECONOMIC STUDIES

Phedon Nicolaides*
Director of Studies

Eric de Souza
Professor

The European Economic Study Programme, in Bruges, provides an in-depth specialisation in the economics of the European Union. The programme offers a comprehensive coverage of European economic integration (process, policies, market functioning, liberalisation and regulation). The workload and analytical demands on the students are high. All courses combine a blend of rigorous economic analysis with a critical assessment of EU policies and, where relevant, of the European economy in general. The programme focuses on European public policies, but several courses also examine the implications for business strategies.

It is aimed at students with a strong academic background in economics. The programme, with its professional dimension, prepares graduates to enter business or the European, international and national public sectors as well as the non-governmental sector, and also provides excellent preparation for doctoral studies.

Options: European Law and Economic Analysis & European Public Policy Analysis

The Department of European Economic Studies in collaboration with the Department of European Legal Studies and the Department of European Political and Administrative Studies offers two options: European Law and Economic Analysis and European Public Policy Analysis, respectively. Options enable the students of each department to take certain courses in common and also to take courses in the other department. Economics students graduate with a Master in European Economic Studies.

A study trip to various EU institutions is organised by the department.

The Department of European Economic Studies benefits from the support of Banco Santander.

Simon Schunz
Professor

The programme EU International Relations and Diplomacy Studies, in Bruges, specialises on the European Union as a global actor as well as on professional skills in international negotiation and diplomacy. It aims at a comprehensive understanding of the EU's external relations. Successful applicants primarily have an academic background in political science, European studies, international relations, diplomatic studies, law or economics. The programme prepares graduates for careers in the European, international and national public administrations, including foreign services, in the private sector and civil society organisations, or to embark upon doctoral studies.

Students follow several compulsory courses in the first semester in order to provide them with a broad knowledge of diplomacy and European external action. In the second semester they choose courses that explore selected topics from the areas of security and justice, foreign economic relations, bi- and multilateral diplomacy or professional skills in greater detail. In addition, students follow a course on the European Neighbourhood Policy, participate in an interactive simulation game on EU crisis management and visit the international organisations in Geneva. Finally, students are required to write a Master's thesis in the field of EU external relations.
